

The Stonehenge Tarot™

© Paul Hurst MMIX

First configuration

For a shorter reading, ignore the outer circle of thirty sarsen stones.

Lay out the middle circle of ten Trilithons, and the centre 'Slaughter Stone'. Starting from the bottom right, going anti-clockwise, number the Trilithons from one to ten, and use the readings from the larger Celtic Cross spread

Card Meanings

- 1 Present influence
- 2 immediate obstacles
- 3 Specific goal
- 4 Past foundation
- 5 Past events
- 6 Future influence
- 7 The Questor
- 8 Influences - both ways
- 9 Inner emotions
- 10 Final result

The centre stone is card number eleven, and relates an overall determining factor relevant to the Questor

Second configuration

This adds another thirty cards, representing the outer circle.

Please note that this is a BIG layout! From side to side, it measures 72 inches – a full six feet.

It does however look very impressive, especially in the right setting, quite a piece of theatre.

And it also offers a chance to make the questor feel very involved.

Being a tadge over six feet tall, I can lay out the circle by kneeling in the middle and stretching out to lay the first two cards. With a bit of practice, it is then not too hard to work round, laying down the rest of the outer cards.

Before laying out the centre eleven cards, I ask the Questor to stand in the middle, think of a specific question, and choose four of the cards at random. I swing these round, so they can be identified later and used to give a second reading.

The Questor is then invited to leave the circle, and the final eleven cards are laid. As the pattern becomes apparent, there may be the odd gasp of recognition. If not, explain the significance.

Third configuration

For a long reading, all forty one cards are revealed and interpreted.

Anyone happy with giving a reading of that size will have probably developed a finely tuned sense of what feels 'right', and will be able to present their own interpretation of the thirty outside cards. For that reason, please excuse me if I don't give my own here.

You may use these layouts in readings, providing accreditation where appropriate. This file, and the information contained may be circulated with this same proviso. It can be reproduced without fee if in this format, without change or alteration.